[1863?]

My dear Fan,

BC151 C116

In case Pa's letter should reach you, before the Evelns had arrived, Bee wish to tell you that. Lou sailed on Saturday (2 d Dec) evening. We saw here leaving from the end of the Jetty and from pinned her with our eyes as long as we could still discern her figure. She would not let me accompany her on board on account of the expected change of weather, and indeed soon after she had gone on board, a strong South Easter began, though it was almost perfectly calmed, when she embarked. She was comparatively in good health and spirits, and we sincerely trust

P.S. Jemmie asks me to tell you that though she has not Mr. Harris since yesterday, and had her also not on Monday, the poor woman being not well enough to come her on the South Easter, she is getting on very well with Viola, who, however requires a good deal of looking after. This will explain why she could not write just now, though writing it very much. I believe Tom will stay with us, till Capt. Jors wants him. Pa's new health is pretty well, though not quite so strong, as I should wish to be. There being room so, I enclose one of Fan's last letters to you.

trust that she will have a good passage. Many thanks for your kind nice letter, and also to Jubb. Tell her that I have Mr. Tolmen the butterflies sent, which he was glad to have. He had a discourse with Jemmie when last here, proving to her that it was not strictly for her butterflies as their organisation does not make them perdulee pests on such occasions.
He wants to get many Rhopa-locera from Natal. Perhaps he will even communicate directly with Guenzius.
With best love to you & Lady Le Yours Jemmie & your affectionate brother Wilhelm

send them now, by this overland mail. — Whilst we were out yesterday, Mrs. Jamieson called. — Today, it is not by four so hot, in fact it was very cool, in the morning with Klaas wind, which has, however, abated just now. — Jemmie sends her best love to her three dear sisters and to the Sanderson.
She intended to write to them all, but feels that just now she is not fit for it, though nothing particular is just the matter with her.
We are following with our thoughts the Eclipse. — Mrs. Evans picket and Kendall left her at last been found, and will be sent by the next boy. — With best love, yours affectionately
Wilhelm
