Dear Dr. Scott,

On looking up your last letter I found that, unless you received news to the contrary, you were to have sent the papers during the first week in March. Is it possible that you did so and that the parcel went astray, for up to now nothing has arrived? My own feelings are that, as there is no particular need for urgency, you postponed sending them until some more suitable time. I wish to assure that this makes no difference to me as I shall not have the opportunity of even glancing at them before the Easter recess (Apr. 1-14) of which the first part - up to about the 8th or 9th - will be spent on research in Durban. This only leaves me about a week to devote to your papers; although, with all the necessary information at hand, I suppose I could make a good start.

Many thanks for your good wishes; my health has improved so much that my only concern now is to become quite strong, and I am well on the way towards this. It is also very necessary for, considering that we have to lecture to both day students and extra-mural students, we are still hopelessly understaffed. If no one of my staff has given up the ghost prematurely it can only be because the gods do not love us!

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

J. A. Angelbrecht

Lates - Only leaving for Durban on the 3rd. You may send the papers now, if you like. J.A.
